

A detailed technical line drawing of a mechanical assembly, viewed from the side. The assembly consists of a large, rectangular housing on the left, which is connected to a central shaft. The shaft is supported by bearings and is connected to a complex mechanical component on the right, which appears to be a pump or motor. The drawing includes various bolts, flanges, and a central shaft with a keyway. The overall design is functional and industrial.

